BANKS OPEN NOVEMBER 30.

Federal Reserve Opening Postponed by Directors at Conference.

The Federal reserve banks probably will not be upen until November 30. The directors of the banks in a conference here yesterday voted 37 to 35 to open for business on that date makes in a conference wholly a destructive force. It is been business on that date, rather than on

In voting for the later date the Federal reserve directors acted against the wishes of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who had selected November 18. The action of the Federal reserve directors is merely advisory, and the final decision will rest with the Federal Reserve Board, which will take the matter un within a day or two.

MAY BREAK ANY TIME.

The opposition to the opening of the banks on November 15 came from the big reserve cities, principally New York, Chicago, and Si. Louis. The objection of Turkey in the war is growing most it was said, was based wholly on physical difficulties in gotting ready for the sarlier gate. In Chicago and St. Louis, for instance, the governors of the Fedural reserve banks have not been selected.

Advices to the State Department continuation with respect to the position of Turkey in the war is growing most tense. Relations between Turkey and Bussia are most strained.

While there has as yet been no definite break, so far as the State Department is informed, a rupture at any time now would occasion no surprise here.

Suspicion plays a tremendous part in jealousy, and the habit of suspicion is fatal to one's peace of mind. I have day at Elvir View. This event will close the water sports of the club for the season.
